

Development of local Products

Since 2015, cutting and processing of meat ; beef, sheep and deer, is then prepared in the catering workshop to meet the needs of the surrounding locality.

These initiatives provide an income to livestock farmers and give recognition of their work.

The workshop for creating wood-carving and sculpture is housed in an equally creative thatched wooden building. The craftsman, an ex-farmer is both passionate and creative who enjoys using wood and natural products for his unique pieces of work.

His workshop uses local materials, notably brush for the roof and wool for insulation, using an ancient, well-tried method of construction.

These recent achievements respond to the new needs expressed by society in favour of an innovative and responsible economy.

1. 2. 3. The raising of cattle and sheep in natural surroundings
4. The meat-processing and wood-carving workshops

Nothing better than a good woollen jumper to keep in the warmth. Why ?

Wool traps a large amount of air, which forms a barrier and traps the heat of your body under your sweater.

